Could Hubway be too popular?

Popularity of bicycle-sharing program leaves some stations without rides ◗ Growing membership could exceed expectations ◗ Some riders worry about sharing ◗ Roughly 21,000 trips taken in less than a month

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

▶ Many of the Hubway stations throughout the city are empty during much of the day.

The city's bicycle sharing program has taken off in its first few weeks and has exceeded some expectations.

However that popularity has left some users without a ride.

Metro observed three Hubway stations void of bicycles for hours during various days in the past week. From about 9 a.m. until about noon Wednesday, for example, the North Station, Faneuil Hall, Hanover Street and Staniford Street locations had a total of one bike between them.

When the program launched three weeks ago, city officials touted various systems that they said would ensure Hubway's success. One of those systems was a team that redistributes the bikes to "balance" Hubway, or ensures that each station is not full or empty.

"I went by a few of them and they were all gone. It's good that they're being used. Obviously there's a need."

GEORGE FEENEY, WHO WAS PERUSING THE FANEUIL HALL STATION ON A RECENT AFTERNOON

"In the first couple of months they're still learning the patterns," said Nicole Freedman, the director of the city's Boston Bikes program.

She credited Mayor Thomas Menino's initiatives to create bike lanes and provide other biking services with helping to launch Hubway's popularity.

Freedman said the goal was to have 3,000 members signed up before the end of the first operational year. On Thursday, the city provided numbers that showed Hubway's usage will likely exceed that expectation.

Ryan Bliss, a former Bostonian who now lives in Portland, Ore., was in the Hub for a convention and decided to take a bike from the Seaport to Faneuil Hall. When he headed inside for a snack and docked his bike, it was the only one in the station's 19 spots.

"I hope it's still here when I get back," he said.

Fortunately for him, it was.

No violation for Seaport saloon

BOSTON. A Seaport bar will not face any sanctions after a patron jumped off of its roof and into Boston Harbor. The city's Licensing Board ruled Thursday that they found no violation by the Atlantic Beer Garden when the man leapt from the bar's roof after the Bruins' victory parade in June. The man landed in the harbor and swam to shore with many other patrons cheering him on. ● METRO

Man arraigned in 2004 murder

BOSTON. A Mattapan man was arraigned Thursday on an outstanding warrant stemming from 2004 after he allegedly stabbed someone on an MBTA bus. According to police reports, Michael Hughes, 64, was arrested in Roxbury Wednesday for the incident that occurred on a Route 39 bus seven years ago. Hughes faces charges including assault with intent to murder and a civil rights violation. Hughes was a fugitive from justice wanted in Baltimore in connection with a murder when the stabbing occurred. ● METRO

Suspect bank robber arraigned

BOSTON. Patrick Cannon, 54, was arraigned Thursday in Municipal Court for masked and armed robbery after allegedly robbing the Cambridge Trust Bank on Beacon Street. According to reports, Cannon paid his outstanding hotel bill in cash, following the alleged robbery, while police were in pursuit. Police said the suspect also admitted to two other recent bank robberies in the area. Cannon was held on $750,000 cash bail and will return to court Sept. 16. ● METRO

The art of diving

Don't be alarmed when you see people jumping off of the Institute of Contemporary Art this weekend.

The museum will play host to the Red Bull Cliff Diving World Series on Saturday.

It is the first time an urban building will be the take-off board.

A diving platform, about 85 feet above Boston Harbor, has been mounted on the roof of the Seaport building.

Boston is serving as the global tour's sixth stop and only event in the United States.

Eleven divers from nine countries are competing in the seven events this year, according to organizers.

The competition is judged by five international jurors including four-time Olympic gold medalist Greg Louganis. METRO/MN

Proposed farmers market fuels food fight

Haymarket vendors fear proposed shops above the Big Dig will create too much competition ◐ Property is state-owned, with federal oversight

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI

▶ Haymarket location

Gov. Deval Patrick's administration is eyeing a spot of land above the Big Dig to place a year-round daily farmers market, but Haymarket vendors fear their businesses will get cropped.

According to State House News Service, the open-air grocers in downtown Boston pushed back efforts to construct on the land, saying it would create unwarranted competition subsidized by the state.

Haymarket advocates want only local goods sold at the proposed site, to differ with the goods from around the world sold at the current market.

"I don't want to create a whole new level of competition," said Emanuel Serra, a member of the Haymarket Pushcart Association.

City officials said efforts to build a new market will only work if it supports Haymarket vendors.

The property they are scoping is a 25,000-square-foot facility on top of the Haymarket T station, located at 136 Blackstone St.

The unoccupied building is state-owned but involves federal oversight because it contains a vent for the Big Dig, according to reports.

Proponents of the proposed food venue are hoping to open next summer.

Recession fears slam Wall Street

Rising fears of another recession hammered U.S. stocks on Thursday, sending major averages sharply lower in a return to the extreme fluctuations investors endured a week ago.

New worries about the health of European banks set the tone before the market's open, and a dismal report on regional U.S. manufacturing fueled a downward spiral in which the Dow dropped as much as 528 points, spurring a flight to safe-haven assets like gold.

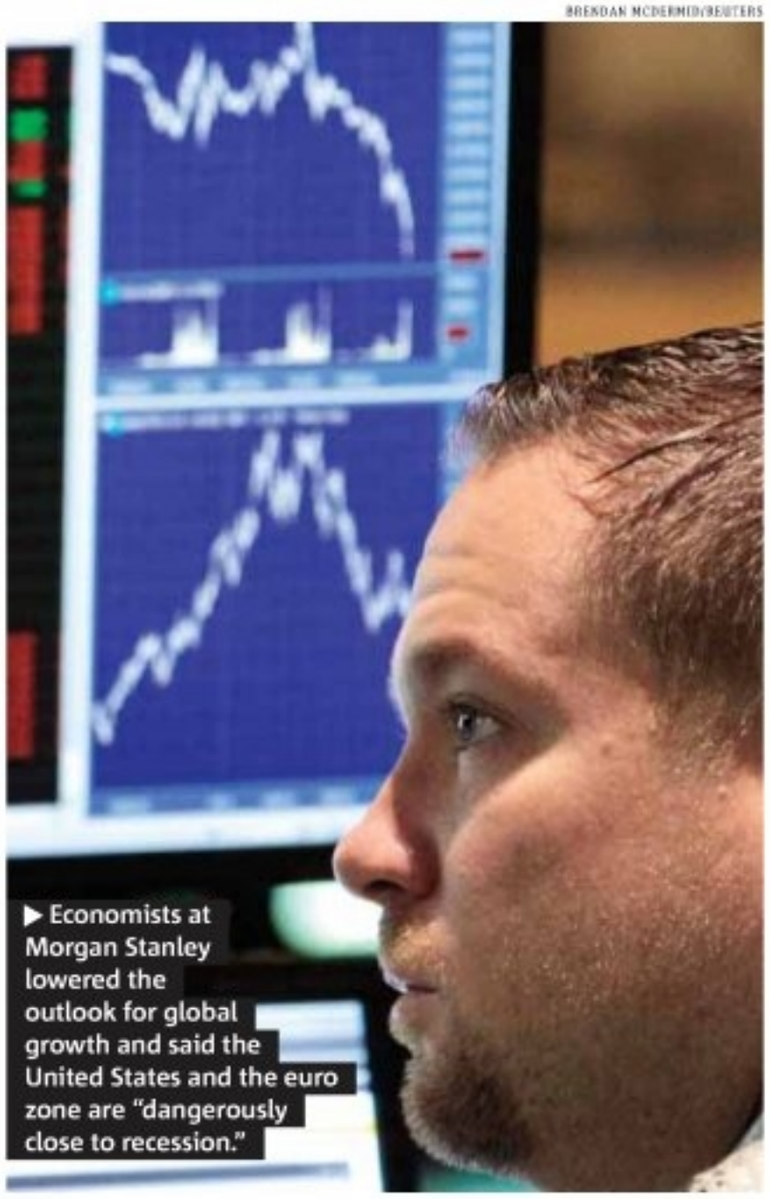
The Nasdaq ended more than 5 percent lower, the S&P 500 more than 4 percent and the blue-chip Dow off more than 3 percent.

"Are we going to go into recession? Most market participants were looking for slow and steady growth, but the statistics and the financial situation here and in foreign economies have disturbed that view," said Richard Weiss of American Century Investments. REUTERS

Bad news

The losses resumed a slide in stocks that began in late July and seemed to moderate in the last few days. In a more worrisome sign, volume was heavier than on recent positive days, with 11.4 billion shares changing hands, the highest so far this week.

BRENDAN MCDERMID/REUTERS



▶ Economists at Morgan Stanley lowered the outlook for global growth and said the United States and the euro zone are "dangerously close to recession."

Existing home sales fall in July

WASHINGTON. Existing home sales unexpectedly dropped in July as cancellations of pending contracts continued to depress buying activity.

The National Association of Realtors said on Thursday sales fell 3.5 percent month over month to an annual rate of 4.67 million units. June's sales were upwardly revised at a 4.84 million-unit rate.

Economists polled by Reuters had expected sales to rise 3.8 percent to a 4.90 million-unit pace. Compared to July 2010, sales were 21 percent higher. REUTERS

"It gives the appearance of melting away, contributing to consumer sector worries."

Maybe it's fate

Anne Hathaway plays a Brit in the screen adaptation of 'One Day,' an epic romance about two best friends over 20 years 'It became a full-frontal assault to get the part,' Hathaway admits

GETTY IMAGES

It doesn't matter if you're an Academy Award-nominated actress and accomplished thespian; confidence can be a struggle for anyone. Anne Hathaway isn't shy about admitting this.

"We're all a mixture of arrogance and insecurity," she says of all actors. "I'm actually not a terribly confident person, I'm just professional."

Hathaway also readily admits that she was initially rebuffed by director Lone Scherfig when lobbying for the part of Emma Morley in the adaptation of David Nicholls' beloved book, "One Day." It depicts the lives of two friends on one day, July 15, of every year for 20 years. Since the characters happen to be British, Hathaway, who is very distinctly all-American, wasn't having an easy time of it.

"It became a full-frontal assault to get the part," Hathaway says. "I was sitting in a club in London trying to explain to Lone why I ought to play Emma Morley and failing miserably. It was the worst meeting I ever had."

But nonetheless, Hathaway won Scherfig over and embarked on exploring the lives of the two characters, who share sexual tension along with a close bond of friendship. Can a straight man and a straight woman be friends? She seems to think so. "Yeah, sometimes there's tension but it needn't get in the way of the relationship," she says. "But I'm not the person to answer this question. I've been in a rock-solid relationship for three years and I'm a one-man woman, so I don't really look at other men that way. I'm terribly boring and loyal and true blue and all that."

- "Knotty Pine" by The Dirty Projectors with David Byrne: This really captures Em and Dex in their younger life.
- "For Emma Forever Ago" by Bon Iver: That album, just that feeling of heartache.

Hathaway on being Catwoman

While promoting "One Day," Hathaway was more than happy to also chat about the project she's currently filming, the third installment of director Christopher Nolan's reboot of Batman.

Just a few weeks ago, a picture of Hathaway in full regalia as Catwoman was leaked from the set of "The Dark Knight Rises" — a fact that's left Hathaway slightly annoyed.

"It's disappointing. I think everyone feels a slight frustration with it because those stills so undercut the work that's being done," she says. "Honestly, wait till you see this movie. Chris is doing insane things in it. It's going to be marvelous, and it's going to be way beyond what anyone imagines that it could be. You can't imagine the things that he's doing, at least I couldn't until I read the script. I was like 'Really? Okay, you're going there.' And it's Chris Nolan — even the picture that he released of me, that's not everything. That's like a 10th of what the catsuit is. I've got to say that I find it frustrating. And I know he finds it frustrating, but I think he's kind of having fun with it — spooning out secrets. He has a lot more control than you think."

"It's going to be way beyond what anyone imagines that it could be."
ANNE HATHAWAY, ON "THE DARK KNIGHT RISES"

Mini review

'Spy Kids 4'

Director: Robert Rodriguez Cast: Jessica Alba, Joel McHale, Jeremy Piven and Ricky Gervais Rating: PG
Grade: 1/4

It's been 10 years since the first film, and while Robert Rodriguez's grasp of microbudget effects has come a long way, his knack for kid-friendly stories hasn't. The jokes are groan-inducing even for the elementary school set, and the less said about the "Aroma-Scope" scratch-and-sniff cards given out at each screening, the better. While it might seem futile to critique the script of a movie like this, it's truly amazing that Rodriguez managed to work the word "time" into almost every line of dialogue.

LOREY SEBASTIAN

▶ Jerry (played by Colin Farrell) claims another neighborhood victim in "Fright Night."

Return of the cold-blooded killer

Colin Farrell is a sucker for vampires, so he plays one in 'Fright Night'
Chris Sarandon on bringing more ruthless bloodsuckers back

For getting into character playing a vampire, Colin Farrell says there's nothing quite like a set of fangs. "I'm a sucker for all things practical, I really am," the Irish actor and "Fright Night" star says, letting the pun go by unmentioned. "It really does affect how you move, instantly. There is some connection that you may not be able to intellectually break down. Some synapse goes off in the head and you begin to react and behave a certain way."

That love of the physical extends to his surroundings as well, meaning you likely won't see Farrell in an "Avatar"-style motion-capture suit anytime soon. "I'm doing a film now with a lot of green screen in it, but the world that I'm in 40 or 50 yards in front of the green screen is a practical set that's been built," he says of his "Total Recall" remake, which is currently filming in Toronto. "It's not like I'm working with a tennis ball as Jar Jar Binks or anything."

Today's vampires

Vampires occupy a bigger place in popular culture than they did when the original "Fright Night" hit theaters in 1985. So what does that film's original vampire, Chris Sarandon, think about how things have changed?

"I think it's interesting that they've become these romanticized figures," Sarandon says. "What they've attempted to do in this picture is return to the original 'Nosferatu' — the truly evil character who has no compunctions about killing. The 'Twilight' movies and 'True Blood' and all that, they're beautifully made and they're wonderfully wrought ... but they are essentially romances."

Fangs or no fangs, Farrell was thrilled about taking on the role of Jerry, the vampire next door in "Fright Night," Craig Gillespie's remake of the 1985 cult classic. While a vampire movie might seem like an odd choice, Farrell is actually living out some boyhood fantasies here. "There were so many vampire films that I had seen as a child, whether they were this — I loved this in its original form — 'The Lost Boys,' 'Near Dark,' many incarnations of Dracula — just so many. They were all in my collective imagination and informed in some way what I did with Jerry."

In fact, Farrell and company had to be careful they didn't inform him too much. "We just tried to keep it loose and see how much to push the vampire thing for me and how much to bring it back," he remembers. "I ended up at times slipping into a kind of Transylvanian accent — I don't know what people from Transylvania sound like, but you know I kind of camped it up like, 'Oo ah ha ha!' I ended up sounding like that and was like, 'Whoa, s—!' Because I'm a film fan, so it was all the others coming out — and 'Sesame Street.'"

Not much new to this 'Conan'

Yes, there's Jason Momoa's rock-hard buns to ogle But otherwise, this new rendition of the comic-book tale offers little new excitement

'Conan the Barbarian'
Director: Marcus Nispel
Cast: Jason Momoa, Rose McGowan
Rating: R
Grade: ●●○○○

The most impressive thing about "Conan the Barbarian" is star Jason Momoa's rear end, which can practically stand up on its own.

The same, sadly, can't be said for Marcus Nispel's movie. It's a straightforward revenge tale that jogs unenthusiastically from action set-piece to action set-piece, borrowing from enough of its predecessors to make the whole thing feel overly generic. The movie's first section, though, is killer; and the highlight is Conan as a boy, played by the ferocious Leo Howard. The resemblance to Momoa is striking, but Howard's barbarian is just that much more animalistic and feral. And when your hero is already a fearless warrior who can behead a whole gang of armed savages twice his size, where else can you possibly go with the character? The only real difference between Conan at the beginning of the movie and Conan at the end is that he's older and played by a different actor. Maybe an entire movie about a preteen barbarian would've been a better idea.

IT ISN'T EASY BEING GREEN? HOGWASH!

Even if you don't know how to be kinder to your planet, you can learn a few tips at GreenFest this weekend

BOSTON GREENFEST 2011

Kermit the Frog may have been wrong. It turns out it is easy being green. At least it is at Boston GreenFest, the region's largest multicultural environmental event. Taking place through Sunday, the event aims to entertain while educating the public on steps they can take to "green" their daily lives. More than 200 performances are lined up for the festival, which kicked off with a free concert last night at the City Hall Plaza.

Over the next two days, Boston GreenFest will continue to celebrate all things eco-friendly through songs, interactive exhibits and eco-games like the One Gallon Challenge — a race where contestants must drive 111 miles from Plymouth to GreenFest on only one gallon of gas.

Festival-goers will have the chance to go green however they choose, whether by buying local fresh and organic fruits and vegetables, stopping by a presentation on the newest green inventions or simply exploring as they enjoy continuous live performances on five stages.

GREENER PASTURES

Green may be a big buzzword, but here are a few tips on how you can actually adopt a few environmentally friendly activities into your daily life Sustainable living isn't just a dream

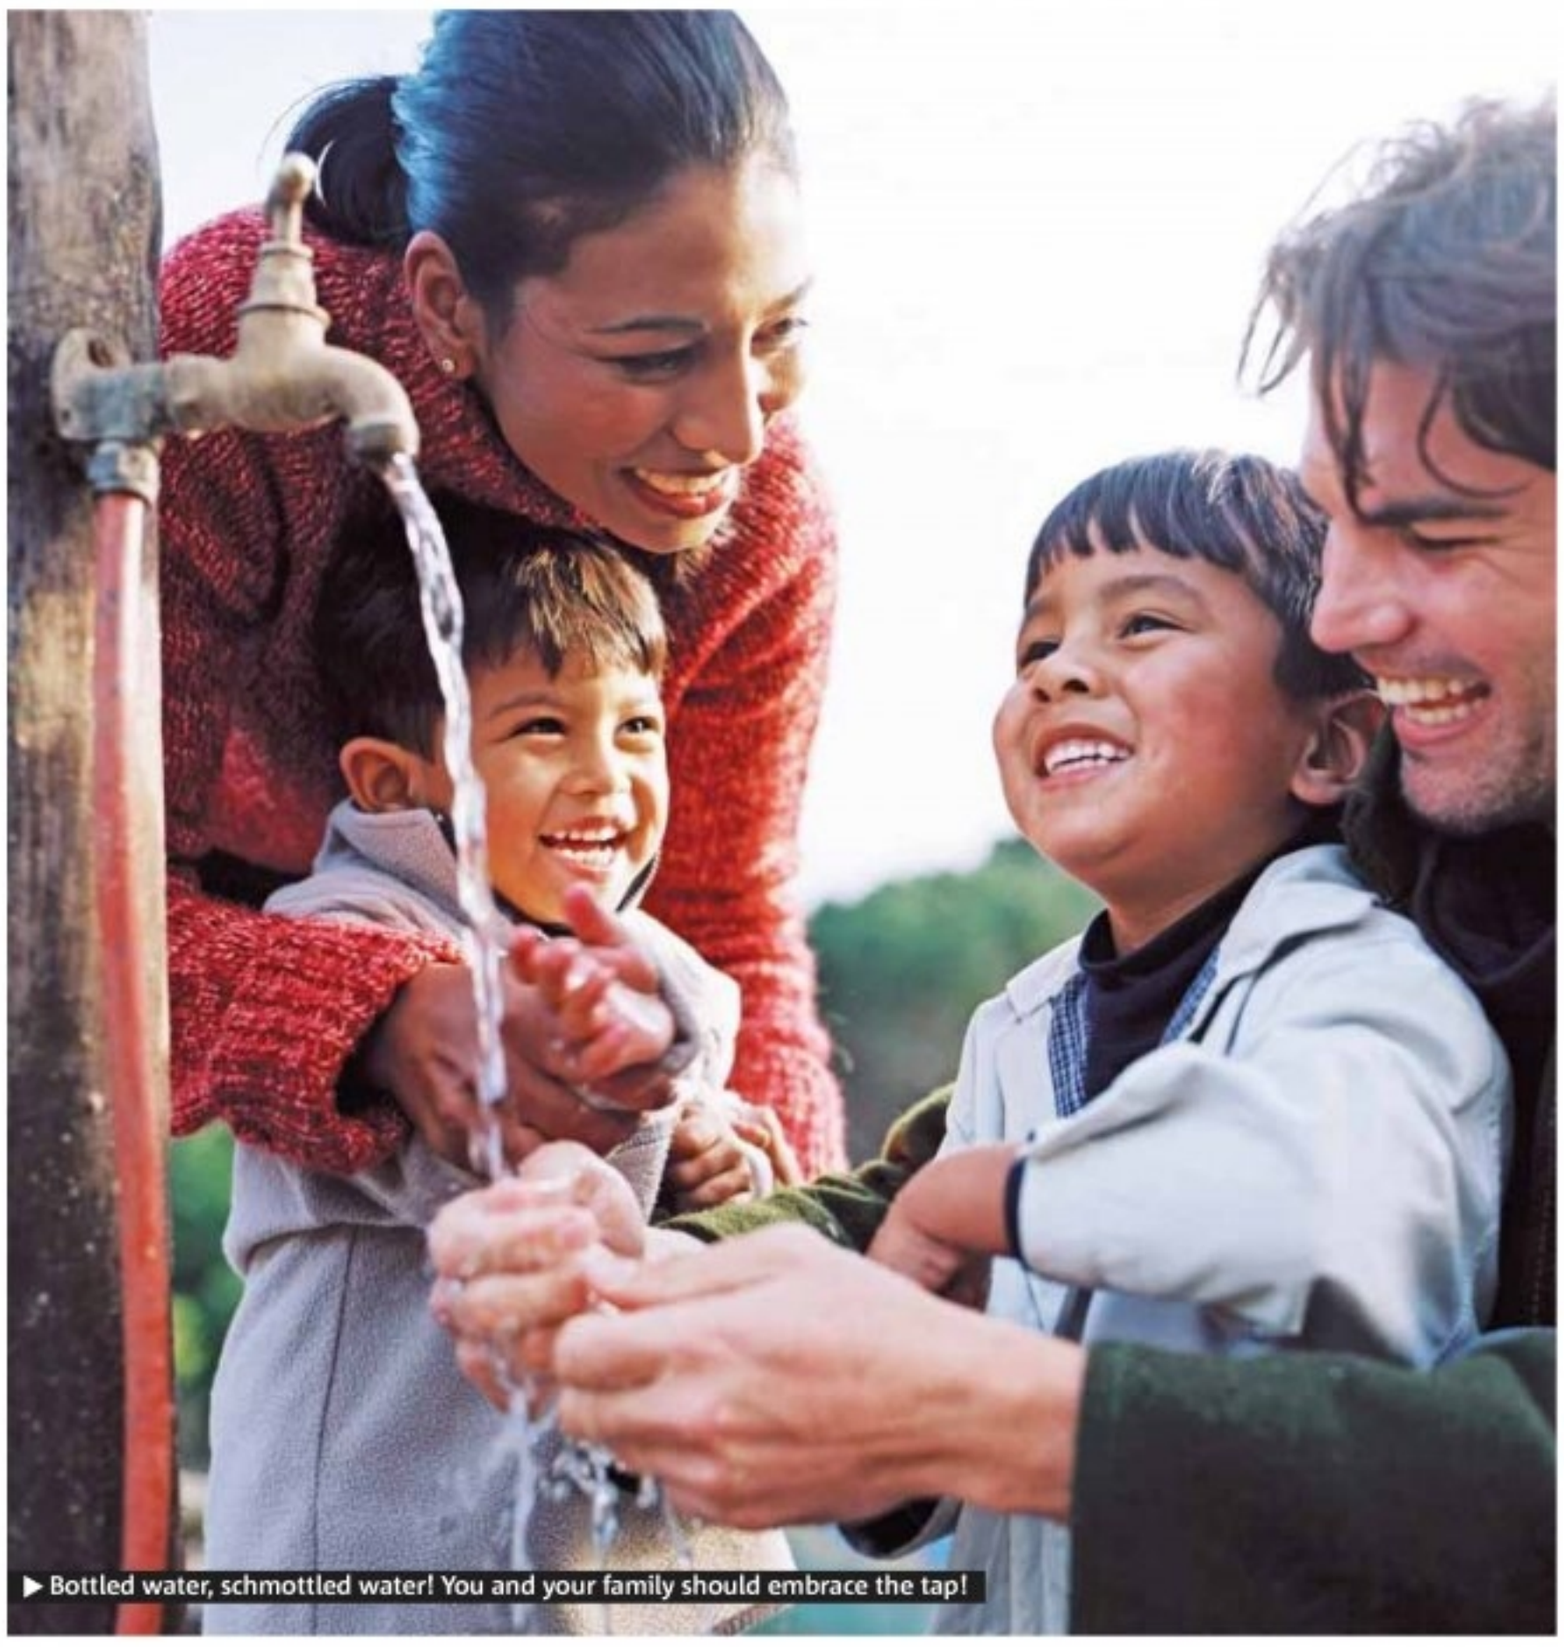
From marketers to politicians to Joe Blow, "green" is a much-bandied, much-abused term. Let's face it, our lives are far from green enough. Boston GreenFest, the annual jamboree organized by the Foundation for a Green Future, Inc. sets out to educate on alternatives for environmentally sustainable living.

"We work with schools and educate on how to bring nature back into people's lives," says foundation president Karen Weber. "We go to community centers and gardening clubs. We're going to the State House to do a green office assessment."

Cue sounds of much shuffling in the State House in an effort to appear green.

But it's not enough to appear aware and as much as our elected officials and other movers and shakers need to green their act, the individual holds their own power over environmental devastation. Always vote with your wallet and choose planet-friendly options, and follow Weber's advice to adopt these three simple habits to make a huge difference:

LINDA LABAN
linda.laban@metro.us



▶ Bottled water, schmottled water! You and your family should embrace the tap!

Can bottled water:
"Lessen the plastic, water and landfill burden. Drink from the tap. Filter it if you want to."

Add a window box, or grow a wild yard:
"If everyone added a window box, imagine how green and beautiful that would make our city."

Walking:
"You save on gasoline, you burn calories at the same time and it makes you feel good. A lot of the things about being green are fun and make you feel better."

Window boxing

"The heart of GreenFest this year will be this great green space," says Weber of the green roof and living walls that will decorate City Hall Plaza, but tragically only for the festival. "I'd love to see the city green itself up in terms of natural greening. With green roofs, living walls and adding any bits of garden we can, it will make a huge difference in air temperature and storm-water savings."

A new lease on life for you and your tenants

If you're a landlord footing the bill for your tenants' utilities, a new program could save you thousands of dollars in energy efficiency improvements that will translate into savings on your monthly energy costs.

Mayor Thomas Menino's Renew Boston initiative will hold two energy-efficiency workshops for Boston-based landlords to learn about free home-energy improvements available through the federal recovery act, as well as utility-sponsored efficiency programs.

Each workshop will feature information on no-cost energy assessment for buildings with four or fewer apartments, free air-sealing to reduce drafts, how to secure up to $3,500 for improvements for each apartment and how to get zero-interest financing on qualified energy improvements.

Energy efficiency specialists and contractors will be available to field questions on how to improve the energy performance of your properties.

Renew Boston representatives will also be on hand to explain new opportunities for federal funding through the city.

BostonCAN and will

Local group uses an age-old forum for education: Block parties If costly conditions keep you from trying to make your home greener, this group may have some ideas for you Shrinking your carbon footprint is possible

The Boston Climate Action Network serves as the city's volunteer watchdogs on all things "green," making sure officials follow through on plans to combat climate change by enacting proposed initiatives.

That's only a portion of what they do.

On a hyper-local level, Loie Hayes, BostonCAN coordinator, said the nonprofit program teaches residents how to live a greener lifestyle by hosting house parties that inform, direct and support making certain changes.

Hayes said BostonCAN organizes "Green Blocks" in individual communities, designating a "block captain" to hold meetings and roll out green initiatives.

"We know that climate change is happening and we are going to have to adjust our living to deal with that fact," she said. "We support them with training and materials and workshops and communications that they need to be able to form a green block and keep it going."

A recent block party in Jamaica Plain brought volunteers together to revamp a resident's living situation to help save on energy costs.

"We worked with a family for a couple of weeks to identify what could be done in the house to be more energy efficient," said Hayes.

A MassCAN affiliate, the Boston-branch tracks the city's climate action plan to make sure people more broadly understand the plan to shrink the carbon footprint 25 percent by 2020.

Hayes said while Boston is in the top tier of cities in the nation planning ahead and proactively addressing climate challenges, the group strives to expand the number and range of communities that understand the issues of climate change.

"We are committed to doing what we can to get people to mitigate and adapt to those changes," she said.

Meet the GreenBest of this year's GreenFest

Through its design, hostelling is more environmentally friendly.

But Hostelling International Boston has taken green living even further and next spring will open in a new location that it plans to have LEED certified by the U.S. Green Building Council.

That's why HI-Boston is the Metro Boston GreenBest 2011 Award winner.

"We work hard to operate a hostel in a responsible way to minimize travelers' footprints," said Deborah Ruhe, executive director of HI-New England.

At its 205-bed hostel on Hemenway Street, the organization has implemented recycling programs, installed low-flow shower heads and displayed posters to educate visitors about living green during their stay.

Some of those methods will carry over to the nonprofit's new, 468-bed building on Stuart Street. That building is being renovated and will accommodate 40,000 travelers each year.

The new location will also feature a green elevator that recaptures energy as it moves, energy-efficient washing machines and large windows to maximize daylight and reduce electricity use.

The education component will also continue with green logos highlighting and explaining the sustainable design and features so travelers can take that knowledge with them after their stay, Ruhe said.

"Our vision is that hostelers become caring world citizens ... who are stewards of the Earth," Ruhe said.

The finalists

- Apex Green Roofs
- Boston Organics
- GreeningRozzie
- Greenschools
- Liveable Streets
- Sunlight Solar

Criteria

- The GreenBest Award finalists were judged on a set of criteria as well as a written statement that highlighted the qualities of the organization.
- Some of the criteria included the organization's promotion of social justice, commitment to the environment that goes above and beyond the competition and educating the consumer as well as employees.

Out on the highway, lookin' for adventure

This year's GreenFest organizers dared participants to create the most ultra-economical vehicles they could as part of the One Gallon Challenge. The vehicles had to be lightweight, have good aerodynamics, be comfortable for passengers and be able to perform in real-life conditions. Thursday, the vehicles made an 111-mile trek from Plymouth to Boston on the energy of one gallon of gasoline. The vehicles will be on display through Saturday.

'No Skies' and no sleep for Slaine

Boston rapper on making time for both music and movies ◗ Up now: A new album ◗ Up next: A movie with Brad Pitt and Ray Liotta

SUBURBAN NOIZE RECORDS

▶ Sleep? Slaine don't need no stinkin' sleep!

While other people sleep, Slaine keeps grinding away, working on his music, contemplating movie roles and touring whenever possible.

That's just how he's wired, the Boston emcee says: "I always have my eye on the future, it's survival for me. ... I have gotten where I am right now because I outwork everybody. I don't stop."

On Tuesday, Slaine's debut solo album "A World With No Skies 2.0" dropped, a year after the original album stalled, due to sample clearing issues.

When it ran into roadblocks last summer, the rapper started releasing free mixtapes for fans.

But with his album finally out, he says the 2.0-version "takes things to another level."

"The record is way different," he says. "It has a substance."

Slaine had to reinterpret the concept after going through a divorce and other struggles that weren't reflected in the original. Where 1.0 was boom-bap, on 2.0 he brought in guitar players, violinists and pianists, creating a sound that is epic and dramatic.

He hits the Middle East stage on Saturday to celebrate the release of his album, followed by in-store appearances in Philly later in the week.

But that's not all.

Notable for his roles in two Ben Affleck films, Slaine recently did work alongside Brad Pitt and Ray Liotta in a mob-style movie set to hit screens in March.

"My time is right now," he says. "I've been working to get here my whole life."

"I always have my eye on the future, it's survival for me. ... I have gotten where I am right now because I outwork everybody."

Talking points

Paltrow OK with surgery

Gwyneth Paltrow thinks there could be certain situations when some cosmetic surgery isn't out of the question. "Before I didn't care about it. And I still refuse to use silicone, Botox or any other of those gimmicks out of pure vanity," she tells Germany's OK! Magazine. "But a breast correction after breast feeding, why not? There's actually nothing else to restore the original condition, isn't there?"

Bullock cuts more ties to ex

In an effort to cut ties from ex-husband Jesse James, Sandra Bullock has had to halt communication with James' 7-year-old daughter, Sunny, according to Us Weekly. "Sandra doesn't communicate anymore with Sunny. Sunny never talks about her," a source says. Another source says that Bullock isn't happy about not being in Sunny's life anymore, but that she "had to move on" from James.

Skinny is better than an Oscar

Jennifer Hudson is thrilled with the weight she's lost, but she didn't always feel fat. "In the neighborhood I'm from, a 16 is normal," she told Self magazine. But in Hollywood, everyone looks the same, so I stood out." The "American Idol" runner-up has shed 80 pounds. "I'm prouder of my weight loss than my Oscar," she says.

Winslet to battle vanity

Kate Winslet is going to form the coolest-sounding superhero group ever! The actress, along with fellow British actresses Emma Thompson and Rachel Weisz, wants to form the "British Anti-Cosmetic Surgery League," with all three vowing to never go under the knife, she tells the Telegraph. "I will never give in. It goes against my morals, the way that my parents brought me up and what I consider to be natural beauty," she says. "I am an actress, I don't want to freeze the expression of my face."

Winslet keeps it real

Exciting. But can this surgery-kicking league go back in time and try to talk some sense into Heidi Montag?

Celebrities who love music

In honor of summer concerts, here are some stars who like to catch live music as much as we do.

1: This April, Katy Perry caught Sleigh Bells during the Coachella Valley Music & Arts Festival in Indio, Calif. Incidentally, Perry just tied Michael Jackson's record for number of No. 1 singles from one album. Would Jacko have ever rocked out like this at somebody else's show?

2: Danny DeVito showed he can get into the groove during the second day of Coachella.

3: Tom Cruise worked out his wolf-whistle during the "Rock The Vote" 2004 National Bus Tour in California all the way back in 2004.

4: Capricorn Clark and Usher caught Nas, Damian Marley and Theophilus London In Concert at Central Park SummerStage on Aug. 11 in New York City.

5: Lady Gaga in Atlantic City? It's true! Here she is catching the Britney Spears and Nicki Minaj concert at the Boardwalk Hall Arena two Saturdays ago in Atlantic City, NJ. Is she enjoying it? Hard to tell.

6: Actress Jodie Foster and son Christopher "Kit" Foster attended the Go-Go's concert at the Greek Theatre on Wednesday in Los Angeles.

7: Remember these guys together? Former couple Jake Gyllenhaal and Reese Witherspoon caught the Jenny Lewis show during 2009's Coachella Valley Music & Arts Festival.

Metro's guide to what's happening in your city this week

Outdoors

Frog Appreciation Day
Saturday, 10 a.m.-2 p.m.
Frog Pond, Boston Common
Free, 617-635-2120
www.bostonfrogpond.com
The Franklin Park Zoo teams up with the city for this day of celebrating the humble frog. Frog-themed games and activities for kids will abound, and the Zoo will provide information for the curious on the global plight of amphibians.

Bicycle Day
Saturday, 9 a.m.-2 p.m.
Larz Anderson Auto Museum, 15 Newton St., Brookline
Free-$10, 617-522-6547
www.larzanderson.org
This event is like the Larz Anderson Museum's car shows, but with bikes instead. Expect to see a lot of rare, old or unusual bicycles. We're hoping for some of those old bikes with the big giant wheel in front and the tiny one in back — those are totally steampunk — but of course, a steam-powered bicycle would be more steampunk.

Festivals

www.fishermansfeast.com
This annual Italian-American festival, whose origins go back to the devotions of the fishermen of Sciacca, Sicily, features carnival games, parades, vendors, performances and, of course, the Flight of the Angel, in which a little girl dressed as an angel is hoisted out a window over the crowd and down to the Madonna, where a prayer is said, and she rises again. Maybe that's what Michael Jackson was doing with Blanket all those years ago?

Theater

This Chicago-based improv troupe have so many comedy superstars for alumni that it's hard to conceive of. Tina Fey, Stephen Colbert and Steve Carell are three recent examples, but the list goes back and back. Even if none of the cast tonight ends up getting huge, you'll still laugh your pants off — they've got improv down to a science.

A dual exhibition of Cuban artists. Dooley's work seems cartoony (in a good, folk-art sort of way), but its female characters' demure facial expressions reveal a much more complicated emotional world. Guerra's work is in a strikingly similar vein, though more surreal and less restrained; his girls seem less like individuals and more like depictions of femininity itself.

Never let those laughs run dry

"BEAR'S EATING ME, GIRL TOLD MUM IN CALL," EXPRESS.CO.UK, AUG. 17. Seldom does a news story have the power to pierce our scaly journalistic hides and expose the blubbering humanity lurking within. Working in a daily newsroom has a way of desensitizing one to all manner of earthly horrors: Exercising "news judgment" means deciding whether an article on a suicide bombing in Iraq ("Only five deaths? Hmm ... were any children?") should take a back seat to a scoop on a crappy retail chain bribing a notorious reality TV buffoon to stop wearing its clothes. You lose focus.

Then you read about a mother listening, via frantic cell-phone calls over a one-hour period, as her teen daughter is literally eaten to death by wild carnivores. And you laugh.

Because what other choice do you have? We here at The Week That Was believe that laughter is the only rational response to this sort of tragedy. Not because it's funny; no — this ranks among the most awful things ever. But our tears have long run dry; and besides, crying helps no one. Laughter remains this cynic's last refuge.

Horoscope

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Aim high if you like, because substantial achievements are possible at this point in time. You might not be able to do the impossible, but you should be able to handle the difficult.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Your judgment is pretty good currently, so now is the time to review past mistakes to discover what you did wrong. Doing so could serve as a preventive measure for you.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Stop and take the time to figure out how to eliminate any continuing obligations you would like to get rid of. The means to do so can be found without causing any problems.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Extra care needs to be given to a development that requires some skillful handling. If you don't allow yourself to be pressured into making a hasty judgment call, you'll come out okay.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Do what you can to reassure a friend that you're truly his or her true chum. It shouldn't be difficult to find ways to express your loyalty, but making the time to do so might be.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. You might have trouble finding ways to further another person's interests, because you may not be able to figure out what she or he wants, but not so with your own endeavors.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. It is quite possible that your ideas are far superior to those of your peers, but convincing them of that is another story. Let them think your brainstorms came from them and it won't be.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Whether you've been pretty good lately at handling your funds, continue to be extra careful. You might not be as skillful at prudence as you think.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Although you prefer to work alone, a partnership arrangement might work out okay for you, provided that you are the one playing the leading role.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Do what you can to assist your co-workers without making a big deal over it. Your deeds will have greater impact if they are carried out unobtrusively, without any fanfare.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. It is generally pretty easy to get your way with friends, but every once in a while some might protest. It could be one of those days, so tread softly.

Red Sox on road a while

The Red Sox won't be around anytime soon. Boston's road trip, which started late Thursday night, has them in Kansas City through Sunday, followed by four in Texas. Andrew Miller will take the mound Friday at K.C. (8:10 p.m., NESN, WEEI). METRO

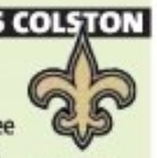
FANTASY FOOTBALL 2011 DRAFT GUIDE

Don't-touch players

These four are being drafted way too high and will bust:

WR MARQUES COLSTON



Where he'll go: 4
Why not: Colston is coming off tricky knee surgery and will lose red-zone chances to Jimmy Graham. We've seen the peak.

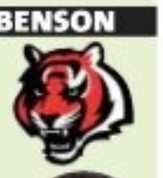
WR GREG JENNINGS

Where he'll go: 2
Why not: With Jermichael Finley healthy and James Jones re-signed, Jennings' targets are going to take a hit. He'll regress this season.

TE CHRIS COOLEY

Where he'll go: 10
Why not: Cooley was already in a bad spot thanks to the Redskins' poor offensive line and quarterback play. Now he has knee issues.

RB CEDRIC BENSON

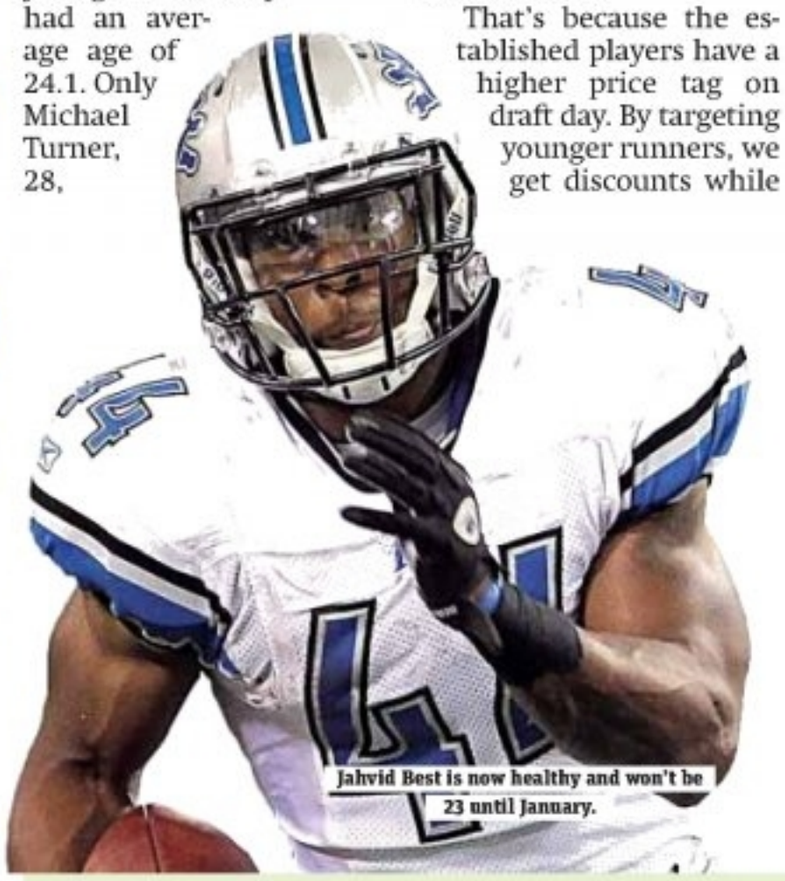


Where he'll go: 5
Why not: Benson managed just 3.5 yards per carry last season and is now a year older with an inferior supporting cast. There's no hope.

Go young

The safe play is to go with the proven talent, the guys who have been there and done that. That's also a losing strategy — especially when it comes to RBs.

Last season, 11 of the top 12 fantasy running backs were 25 years old or younger and they had an average age of 24.1. Only Michael Turner, 28, bucked the trend.



Jahvid Best is now healthy and won't be 23 until January.

By now, everyone should realize how short a running back's shelf life is. They fall off a cliff without much warning, succumbing to dead legs and injuries. While unproven talent seems riskier, the old guard actually comes with the most risk.

That's because the established players have a higher price tag on draft day. By targeting younger runners, we get discounts while simultaneously avoiding potential cliff-divers.

So take the plunge and get on the right side of career arcs with backs like these:

Jahvid Best, Lions

Now that Best is healthy and Mikel Leshoure is out for the year, the sky is the limit. Best's all-world speed on the Ford Field turf is scary.

Shonn Greene, Jets

LaDainian Tomlinson has been reduced to a third-down role only. Greene is the bell cow and will push for 300 carries in a run-first offense.

Mark Ingram, Saints

As the star of Saints camp so far, Ingram is locked into the starting job. And as the only true goal-line option in an explosive offense, double-digit touchdowns are a real possibility.

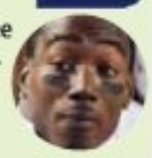
ADAM LEVITAN
alevitan@metro.us

Must-own players

These four can be had relatively cheap and will break out:

WR M. MANNINGHAM

Target in Round: 6
Why: With Steve Smith gone, Manningham will see a major bump in targets. He's a big play waiting to happen.



QB MATT STAFFORD

Target in Round: 8
Why: Now fully healthy, Stafford is at the controls of a pass-happy, potentially explosive offense. His aggressiveness will lead to heaps of TDs.

TE JARED COOK

Target in Round: 11
Why: Cook is an athletic freak that is now locked into the "move" tight end position. Matt Hasselbeck already loves throwing to his new toy.

RB FELIX JONES

Target in Round: 4
Why: For the first time, Jones has this backfield all to himself from jump street. We know he's explosive and now he's staring at 16-18 touches per game.

Cream of the crop: The overall Top 10

1 Arian Foster, RB, Hou. — Elite talent running behind the best offensive line in the NFL. Can't miss.

2 Chris Johnson, RB, Ten. — Don't worry about the holdout. Johnson will have more space in new regime.

3 Adrian Peterson, RB, Min. — Worries about his supporting cast knock "All Day" out of the top 2.

Foster

4 Jamaal Charles, RB, KC — Now established as one of the game's premier backs, Charles' workload will grow.

5 Michael Vick, QB, Phi. — If you're worried about injury, snag Vince Young late as a handcuff.

6 Ray Rice, RB, Bal. — Willis McGahee is gone, leading to goal-line work for Rice.

7 Andre Johnson, WR, Hou. — No wideout is a safer bet for 1,400 yards and 8 TDs.

8 Darren McFadden, RB, Oak. — Elite pure talent that plays on all three downs. Get Michael Bush as handcuff.

9 Calvin Johnson, WR, Det. — As the Lions' offense improves, Megatron will see less double-teams.

10 Aaron Rodgers, QB, GB — Underrated running ability makes A-Rod worth a first-rounder.

Local prospects

Welker

Tom Brady

- Metro QB Rank: 3
- Outlook: We know about Wes Welker and Chad Ochocinco, but the TE pairing will keep Brady elite.
- Strategy: He's safe right there in Rounds 2/3.

Rob Gronkowski

- Metro TE Rank: 9
- Outlook: A demon in the red zone, he's a good bet to push for double-digit touchdowns.
- Strategy: A fine sleeper after the top TEs are gone.

Wes Welker

- Metro WR Rank: 20
- Outlook: Now another year removed from the ACL tear, Welker figures to be even quicker.
- Strategy: Give him a huge bump in PPR formats.

UFC boss: FOX deal represents 'pinnacle'

MMA juggernaut inks seven-year TV deal • Four events a year will be shown on FOX, with programs on FX, Fuel • First major broadcast deal

UFC president Dana White seemed exceptionally happy yesterday. And he had good reason to be.

The UFC and FOX officially announced a seven-year television deal, putting regular events on broadcast TV for the first time — as well as lining the promotion's pockets with a reported $90 million a year.

White, who's never been shy about his aspirations of making mixed martial arts "the biggest sport in the world," called it "the pinnacle."

"This was it for me," White said in an afternoon press conference at FOX Sports' studios. "This is what I always wanted. This is what I always felt was the pinnacle for us here in the United States."

Later, he told Metro the UFC won't be shy about putting its top stars on the broadcast television cards. He wouldn't rule out using heavyweight Brock Lesnar, probably the promotion's No. 1 pay-per-view draw.

Brady gets starting nod

GETTY IMAGES

Tom Brady got the start for the Patriots in Thursday night's preseason game at Tampa Bay.

It took the veteran quarterback just 3:15 to make an impact, tossing a 16-yard touchdown pass to tight end Aaron Hernandez to cap New England's opening drive.

Chad Ochocinco and Wes Welker were also among the Pats starters.

The New England 'D' opened the game in a 4-3 set, forcing a three-and-out on the Buccaneers' first drive. Jerod Mayo starred there. METRO
